

The Plan of Campaign.

It is Denounced by a Tipperary Priest.

IRISH CIRCLES STIRRED UP.

The church to remain neutral in the differences between the peasants and the land owners—indications that all parties are to be broken up—other dispatches from abroad.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Something of a storm in Irish political circles has been caused by the action of a Tipperary priest named Conway, in denouncing the plan of campaign as detrimental to the best interests of the country, and condemning the tendency of the people to yield blind allegiance to agitators whose advice was often contrary to good morals. The bishop of Cork has also very recently expressed himself in similar though rather more guarded terms.

The bishops and priests in Ireland have as a rule kept clear from the question of partiality to either of the two contending parties, coming together, attract much attention. The church as a whole would undoubtedly prefer to see more amicable relations existing between the peasants and landowners, but the priests who come in daily contact with the masses know that their influence would be seriously impaired if they should take any stand in opposition to the movements advocated by the leaders who hold warm places in the people's hearts. The result has been to keep the church neutral.

The situation at Tipperary is exceptional, the recalcitrant element among the tenants having engaged almost exclusively from the South-Bury estate to New Tipperary, and leaving only such a constituency as would be likely to receive such utterances as those of Father Conway in a favorable spirit. The London Times claims to have discovered a formidable reaction throughout Ireland against the policy so long pursued under Nationalist auspices, and predicts that a strong anti-plan of campaign party will soon be formed.

If this information be correct, it would seem possible that the clerical deliverances above noted may have been intended as forerunners of the new movement. Other observers express the belief that with Mr. Davitt preaching loud tenure reform as more important than the plan of campaign, and other existing movement, and with the other leaders much at odds as to the best way of meeting the situation created by the crop failure, the signs of the times point to the general breaking up of old political fetich-worships, and a crystallization along some new line of action.

A Slim Explanation. BRISTOL, Sept. 18.—The explanations put forth by The Berlin Post and other more or less official organs in regard to the Irish restoring the East Africa slave trade are as foggy as to entirely fail in their supposed object of justifying the measure complained of. Not only so, but the inconsistencies visible among the various contemporaries give rise to the suspicion that the true innards of the affair is not understood at Berlin even by the colonial office.

It is considered possible that the local officials on the coast may have blundered, and gone further than they were warranted in doing, through some misinterpretation of instructions. The probability is that the intention of the government was to simply assure the Arabs that the new rulers of the country would not meddle with such domestic slavery as they found existing, though they would not sanction the slave trade as a whole. It will be recalled that even the famous Christian missionaries, admitted the necessity of permitting domestic slavery under the present conditions of African society.

Labor Troubles. MELBOURNE, Sept. 18.—In response to the demand of the union leaders for a settlement of the questions in dispute the employers have replied that while they sympathize with the leaders in desire for a settlement they are not satisfied that the executive possesses the authority to effect a compromise on behalf of the strikers generally.

The stevedores and dock laborers here have struck. The loading of mail and other steamers is suspended. The president of the Wool Shearers' union states that the shearers have not been asked to break their agreements. There have only been instructed not to accept fresh work.

The western rollers will obey the order to stop work, but they do not approve of it.

More About Boulanger. PARIS, Sept. 18.—The statements made by Gen. Boulanger have influenced M. Naguet to retain his seat in the chamber of deputies, in order to refute the calumnies uttered by the general.

The Emperor in his series of articles reviewing the inside history of Boulangerism, describes the confusion that occurred among the leaders of the party owing to Gen. Boulanger's unexpected departure for Brussels to avoid arrest.

The Deed of a Demon.

A Terrible Tragedy at Portsmouth, N. H.

THREE DEAD AND TWO DYING.

A Cooper Shoots Three of His Daughters and His Wife's Paramour and Then Sends a Bullet Crashing Into His Own Head—Details of the Crime.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Sept. 18.—A terrible tragedy occurred here last night, and there is great excitement. Fred. H. J. Hein, aged 45 years, a cooper in the employ of the Eldridge Brewing company, has a family of three daughters, the eldest, Carrie, aged 15 years, keeping house for him. His wife, who it is said was unfaithful, having left him several months ago. Since she left it is reported the girl, Carrie, has become wayward.

Hein's troubles preyed upon his mind until he resolved to end them, and remove from temptation the three female members of his household. Two of them and the prisoner himself lie dead in his home, while at the hospital the third daughter lies dying with a bullet in her neck, and at his home Charles W. Taylor, a well-known hardware merchant, whose name has been connected with that of Mrs. Hein, lies with two bullet holes in his back. Before the discovery of Hein's dead body officers and citizens were scouring the city in search of him and had fallen into the hands of the mob he would have been lynched.

The story of the murder is: Charles W. Taylor while entering his residence about 7:30 last night, was rushed upon by the murderer, who fired two shots both of which took effect in the small of his back. Taylor is still alive, but very low. He says he does not know what prompted Hein to shoot him. The doctors are doubtful about saving him.

Shortly before 8 o'clock people in the vicinity of Hein's house heard five pistol shots fired in rapid succession, and Maud, the 13-year-old daughter of Hein, ran out of the house and down the street. She proceeded but a short distance when she fell on the pavement, saying, "Father has shot me." The girl was taken to the hospital, where she now lies in a critical condition. Three shots were fired at her, all taking effect.

The lower part of Hein's house was the scene of the murderer's most brutal work, and it shows evidence of a desperate struggle. The kitchen was covered with blood and everything was in great disorder. Just outside the back door of the house lay two bodies. Carrie, the oldest girl, lay with her face covered with blood, the bullet having entered the left side of the face, passing upward toward the brain, death having resulted instantly. Across her prostrate form lay Bertha, the youngest daughter. When found she was unconscious and she expired in fifteen minutes. The bullet that caused her death having entered her head just behind the left ear.

Sheriff Coffin arrived at Hein's house at 3:15 and directed men to search for the murderer. Meanwhile Marshall Joy and a force of officers arrived and it was decided to closely examine the chambers. As they entered the front chamber they found the dead body of Hein stretched on the floor. A bullet had passed through his head from the revolver which lay by his side. The crowd which had gathered about the house were highly excited and had the murderer been taken alive he certainly would have been killed by them.
